United States Air Force Element, NPS
Advanced Academic Degree Research Topics
by Geographic Combatant Command
Overview:

In order to formalize and provide recommended research topics for Air Force Students attending the Naval Postgraduate School (NPS) as part of an Advanced Academic Degree (AAD), this document synchronizes the Combatant Command’s (COCOM) strategic priorities and high-emphasis topics with current Air Force Element (AFELM) NPS studies. This document will help students focus research on ongoing initiatives and future strategically important topics. While not inclusive of all relevant ongoing matters, this document can also assist students during their research topic brainstorming. In addition to COCOM topic inputs, this document also identifies existing efforts through Joint Staff J-7 to solicit research topics.

Joint Staff’s main focus is to provide research topics to Joint Professional Military Education (JPME) Schools. Their existing database is named “Joint Professional Military Education Prospective Research Topics Database”—PRTD; https://jdeis.js.mil/jdeis/index.jsp?index=324. Joint Staff’s solicitation for research topics is conducted with the COCOM, Supporting Commands, the Services, the Joint Staff, and Service Centers for Lessons Learned annually. After compiling research topics, the Joint Staff provides a list of topics to students attending advanced military study programs and intermediate and senior service schools.

This document is organized by Geographic Combatant Command (GCC). It provides a brief description of each GCC, identifies its mission statement, notes their current command priorities/line of efforts, and identifies recommended research topics by GCC.
