PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Naval Postgraduate School, Program for Culture and Conflict Studies

Director, January 2007 – Present

Naval Postgraduate School, Department of National Security Affairs

Research Professor, December 2003 – Present

Professor Johnson was appointed to the faculty of the Naval Postgraduate School's National Security Affairs Department in December 2003. He also directs the NPS Program for Culture and Conflict Studies that is sponsored by a variety of funding sources accounting for more than 1.2 million dollars of research projects annually for many years. At NPS, Johnson is teaching courses on Afghanistan, Central Asian and Eurasia crises, politics, terrorism and security. He regularly conducts field research in Afghanistan and South Asia and Central Asia. In the summer of 2010 Professor Johnson served as the Counterinsurgency Advisor to the Commander of Task Force Kandahar (Gen Jon Vance).

The Program for Culture & Conflict Studies (CCS) conducts research in support of United States initiatives in Afghanistan. This research provides comprehensive assessments of provincial and district tribal and clan networks in Afghanistan, anthropological assessments of Afghan villages, and assessments of the operational culture of Afghan districts and villages. Under the direction of Professor Johnson and coordination with the Department of National Security Affairs, CCS provides information and assessments to military personnel, academics, and the general public since 2007. Faculty members regularly hold conferences, workshops and briefs to deploying troops, as part of the Regional Security Education Program (RSEP) and Leadership Development & Education for Sustained Peace (LDESP).

Between 2002-2010, Professor Johnson served as a member of the US delegation to the NATO ATP 45 and co-chairman of the sub panel of NBC Communication and Information System Interoperability and Integration and other technical panels dealing with Weapons of Mass Destruction.

Professor Johnson also serves as a Senior Research Associate for NPS's Center for Contemporary Conflict where he has conducted research on Afghanistan, Jihadist, and Terrorism. In 2010 he served as the Counterinsurgency Advisor for Task Force Kandahar and the Commander of Canadian Forces in Afghanistan.

Alion Science and Technology (Formerly the IIT (Illinois Institute of Technology) Research Institute, IITRI), Modeling and Simulation Technology Research Institute (MaSTRI)

Vice President, September 2002 – December 2003

Director, July 2001 – December 2003

Johnson was responsible for the technical direction and management of the Modeling and Simulation Technology Research Institute (MaSTRI). MaSTRI was established in 2001 to be a center of excellence in modeling and simulation. MaSTRI represents a collaborative effort between the Illinois Institute of Technology Research Institute (IITRI) and the University of Virginia (UVa).

He led a MaSTRI effort in the design of math, science, and social science modeling and simulation curriculum for K-12 public education for a Texas public school district.

Johnson also served as a Principal Senior Political and Military Analyst for IITRI. In this role, he supported OSD and others for Operation Enduring Freedom where he played a key role in the development of the initial PSYOPS campaign in Afghanistan. He briefed widely to Senior Government Decision makers in the months following September 11, 2001.

Johnson also led a major CBRN data modeling effort for the Joint Effects Model (JEM) and Joint Effects Federation (JOEF) – DoD's authoritative hazards prediction model and CBRN operational effects federation. In this role he served as the Chair of the DATSD (CBD) CBRN Data Working Group that formulated certification strategies for authoritative CBRN data and resources.

George Mason University, The Institute of Public Policy

Senior Research Associate, 1995-2001

Conducted research and instruction in support of GMU's Program of Peacekeeping Policy. Conducted research on the structure of Peace Operations and associated tasks' relevance to post-World War II international crises. This work has complemented the development of GMU/TIPP's Conceptual Model of Peace Operations.

Also conducted research for NATO on Peace Operation tasks and force structure. Participated in the annual, internationally acclaimed Cornwallis Group annual Peacekeeping Conferences at The Lester B. Pearson Canadian International Peacekeeping Training Centre. Johnson participated at Bosnia-Herzegovina After Action Review (BHAAR I) conducted at the US Army Peacekeeping Institute, U.S. Army War College.

Center for Foreign Policy and National Security Research

Director, 1994 - 1995

Responsible for all management and analytical direction of the Center for Foreign Policy and National Security Research. This Center served as an objective, nonpartisan research organization-serving clients in the national security and foreign policy communities. Research projects included the examinations of potential conflict resolution on the Korean Peninsula and South Asia, proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and the economic implications of defense spending and economic conversion.

SPARTA, Inc.

Senior Principal Investigator and Director of National Security Studies and Systems, 1990 - 1994

Responsible for analysis and management with a research and development firm dealing with national security and foreign policy systems, technologies and issues; extensive support for U.S. Government negotiations, and analysis dealing with missile defense and the national security implications of the dissolution of the former Soviet Union. Specifically, Johnson: served as a key analyst and manager examining the missions, operations and requirements for new defense systems in the post-Cold War era; examined a variety of issues related to the demise of the Soviet Union and the implications for strategic policy and stability, and analyzed a variety of regional conflict contingencies.

He also directed a major research project on the Military Technical Revolution (MTR) and the economic costs associated with MTR participation, the MTR's technology and warfighting implications and the MTR's impact on proliferation for the Office of Net Assessments/Office of the Secretary of Defense.

Johnson served as a lead analyst in supporting the Defense Intelligence Agency/Missile and Space Intelligence Center (DIA/MISC) tactical ballistic missile threat definition project and Ballistic Missile Defense Organization's (BMDO) Capstone STAR and Theater Missile Defense (TMD) country specific threat analysis studies.

The Orkand Corporation

Director of the Policy Sciences and National Security Analysis Division, 1982 - 1990

Responsible for the, management and research of the firm's programs with the Foreign Policy and National Security Communities. Johnson either managed and/or served as Principal Investigator for over forty projects for clients concerned with defense policy, intelligence, international affairs and national security.

Selected analytical projects included: an analysis of the prospects for defense economic conversion conducted for DoD's Office of Economic Conversion; detailed analyses of NATO burden sharing issues; numerous "estimative" analyses and the development of quantitative tracking systems of nearly every global "trouble-spot" of the 1980s-- research and analysis was conducted in Europe, South Asia, Near East, Asia and Latin America; policy analysis concerning international technology transfer for DoD; a major study of narcotics production and trafficking in Latin America and its consequences for regional stability--this study also evaluated roles of the U.S. military in assisting Latin American countries' anti-narcotics activities; a variety of studies that produced long-range military estimates of the Middle East, Persian Gulf, South Asia -- in particular Afghanistan and Pakistan where he lead a major government research team on South Asian conflicts-- and Africa; supported the Stillwell Commission on Intelligence and Counterintelligence through the development of resource allocation models and threat and vulnerability studies.

He also led the development and deployment of a variety of automated analyst aids, models, and simulations for the defense and intelligence communities.

CACI, Inc.-Federal (Policy Sciences Division)

Senior Research Associate, 1979 - 1981

Responsible for analytical projects and systems analysis in the areas of national security, international relations and political economics.

Research sponsors included the Defense Advanced Projects Agency (DARPA), Department of State and a major international aerospace firm.

School of International Relations, University of Southern California

Lecturer, 1976 - 1978
