Dr. Sandra Leavitt
Director of the Graduate Writing Center and Thesis Processing Office, Sandi joined the NPS faculty in 2009 as a research assistant professor and executive director of the research-oriented Center on Contemporary Conflict in the Department of National Security Affairs. She previously taught at the University of California at Santa Cruz, Catholic University of America, Georgetown University, and the U.S. Department of State’s Foreign Service Institute. She has nearly thirty years of experience in research grant writing, project and program management, and academic publishing. She received her master’s from the Johns Hopkins University and PhD from Georgetown University.

Aileen Brenner Houston
Currently deputy director of the Graduate Writing Center, Aileen has been a writing coach, thesis processor, and attribution lead at NPS, and has twenty years’ experience in periodical and academic publishing, including copyediting for the Modern Language Association (MLA). She holds a BA in theatre and creative writing from Washington College and an MA in rhetoric, writing, and digital media studies from Northern Arizona University, where her research focused on plagiarism prevention. As a military spouse, Aileen appreciates the unique demands placed on students at NPS.

Dr. Kate Egerton (contractor)
Kate enjoys helping students navigate complex writing tasks, compose striking sentences, and get the most out of every hour at the keyboard. At the GWC since 2016, Kate also teaches writing courses for the departments of National Security Affairs and Defense Analysis. She taught writing and literature at Berea College, Indiana University South Bend, the University of Notre Dame, and Duke University. Kate earned her BA in English and Scandinavian studies at Luther College and her MA and PhD in English at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Daughter of a Navy SWO with longstanding ties to NPS, she is happy to be back on the Central Coast.

Dr. Lawrence Shattuck (Colonel, U.S. Army, Retired)
Larry is a senior lecturer in the Operations Research Department, where he serves as director of the Human Systems Integration Program. He is also the chair of the NPS Institutional Review Board. He received his BS in general engineering from the United States Military Academy, his MS in human factors psychology from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, and his PhD in cognitive systems engineering from the Ohio State University. He has been an active researcher in the domain of military command and control for three decades.
